

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
INSTITUTIONAL REVIEW BOARD
IRB # 2017-01-001

The University of Chicago Institutional Review Board (IRB) is a committee of faculty, staff, and students that reviews research proposals involving human subjects to ensure that the research is conducted ethically and in accordance with federal regulations. The IRB is located at 5408 South University Avenue, Chicago, IL 60637. For more information, please contact the IRB at (773) 936-4100.

The IRB is composed of members from various departments and schools, including the Law School, the Booth School of Business, and the Divinity School. The IRB meets regularly to review research proposals and to provide recommendations to the researchers. The IRB is committed to protecting the rights and welfare of human subjects and to promoting the integrity of research.

The IRB is required to review all research involving human subjects that is funded by the federal government or that is conducted in a university setting. The IRB is also required to review research that involves vulnerable populations, such as children, prisoners, and the elderly. The IRB is authorized to approve research that meets the criteria for ethical research and to withhold approval from research that does not meet these criteria. The IRB is also responsible for monitoring the progress of approved research and for providing ongoing support to researchers.

The IRB is committed to transparency and accountability. The IRB provides researchers with detailed information about the review process and the criteria for approval. The IRB also maintains a public database of approved research projects. The IRB is also committed to providing training and education to researchers and to the general public about research ethics and the IRB's role in protecting human subjects.

The IRB is a key component of the University of Chicago's commitment to research integrity and to the protection of human subjects. The IRB is dedicated to ensuring that all research conducted at the University of Chicago is conducted ethically and in accordance with the highest standards of research integrity.
